

For over a century Toynbee Hall has fought against poverty and inequality in East London and beyond, and today remains an even more vital resource for young and older people, families and the wider community.

We pride ourselves on putting people and communities at the heart of everything we do, from shaping our services to building our evidence base; from co-creating new ideas to speaking truth to power.

We enable people to tackle the things that stop them from taking opportunities and fulfilling their potential: whether that is debt, their wellbeing, financial exclusion or other injustices; and we use our learning to influence essential social policy and practice, challenging the systemic barriers that hold people and communities back and coming up with new solutions to age old problems.

Our welcoming Community Wellbeing Centre and face to face advice services are open 6 days a week, in the same patchwork of streets where we were first established more than 130 years ago. Since then we've seen huge changes in London and in the immediate area around us, many of which offer great opportunities. But the entrenched challenges of poor housing, low pay, debt and insecurity remain as bad as they have ever been. Working in partnership with many other organisations and institutions, we strive every day to meet those challenges head on, and create a better London for everyone.

If you want to find out more about our work with families and young people; our partnerships; our place in the community; and how you can support us to create opportunities for all of the communities of East London, then please do explore our website, or better still get in touch with us.
